

Logan Home
307 English Circle

The Akers-Payne home was built in 1925. The original homes of English Circle were all designed by the same architect who wished to create a cul-de-sac of homes that were replicas of what would be found in historic England. These homes were all part of the development by Nelson Real Estate and Development Company.

In August of 2010 Dan and Kristi Logan purchased the home and began renovations. Walls were moved and reconfigured to have this historic home fit the busy lifestyle of their family. The kitchen redesign and interior design was completed by Shea Bryars of Shea Bryars Design.

Windows on the front porch have been removed to recreate the original look of the front entranceway of 1925. Other additions to the front yard have been designed and implemented by Kelly Hulsey of Hulsey Garden Design, landscape designer and friend of the homeowners.

Taylor Home (Designer show home)
102 Hollywood Boulevard

One of the first homes to be built in the Hollywood neighborhood, 102 Hollywood Boulevard was designed by architect George P. Turner in 1925. Alongside its neighbor, No. 100, the houses were used in promoting the new development. Honoring the first owners, the home is known historically as the Brown House.

In 1999, Rebekah and Mort Taylor purchased the house. Desiring the house to reflect its original character, they refurbished the house starting with the removal of undesirable elements that had been added over the decades, which uncovered the kitchen's original five-foot apron front sink. The kitchen was originally three different rooms: a mudroom, a breakfast room and a utilitarian kitchen. The space today includes an eat-in area along with custom cherry cabinetry that was built around the iron sink and topped honed granite.

Requiring a complete remodel, the front bath was inspired by the couple's favorite London hotel. The iron pedestal sink was uncovered in the basement of neighbors, Katie and Art Tipton. Thanks to generous friends, not only is the sink appropriate to the period of the house, it is original to Hollywood Boulevard.

For tour this home is the backdrop for local designers to show current trends in design. In addition to the art and furnishings, the house is currently for sale as well.

Hain Home
212 Poinciana Drive

This charming cottage was built in or around 1929. In 1938 the directory lists the owner and occupants at 212 Poinciana Drive as Samuel C. Burns, district manager at Jeffrey Manufacturing Company, and his wife, Grace. Poinciana Drive was outside Birmingham limits until 1938 so records of the home are based on notes received from neighbors and limited documents in 1939. In 1939 the home was also photographed and is now part of the archives at the Jefferson County Library located in downtown Birmingham.

In 2008 Jack and Charm Hain purchased the house and turned it into a masterpiece. Doors to the outside were added to every room on the main floor for the homeowners and guests to enjoy the magnificent yard. The large picture window in the front of the home was replaced and now is a frame to a wonderful piano. A second story was also added to the main home. The small garage was updated with a second story and includes a workout area.

When you enter onto the property you find that the garden never ends and gets better as you walk around the home. This home is a gardeners delight with an abundance of herbs, bulbs, perennials and fruit trees. A tranquil pool is just steps away from home and back house.

The home has a warm feel due in part to the great antique furniture and the wonderful art from Alabama artists that adorns the walls.

Bishop Home
304 English Circle

The Binzel house was built in 1925 and was part of the Nelson Real Estate and Development Company creation of the cul-de-sac known as English Circle.

In 2010 the home was purchased by Brandon and Katy Bishop. A major remodeling project soon was underway. The Bishops needed to create an ideal living space for their growing family. Without disrupting the historical integrity of the home the Bishops added a second floor and additional living space on the main floor. The redesign of the home was created by Joe Ellis owner of Dwelling Architects and executed by Homewood based Twin construction.

With the assistance of interior designer Jan Ware the perfect finishing touches have been made to the home to create a family friendly home with clean lines. To add curb appeal and create a more useful landscape, Peter Falkner of Falkner Gardens designed and executed the new landscape design.
